Foreword

This booklet is compiled in loving memory of J. Jacob and Emma Ensinger.

With ever-thankful hearts to almighty God for having given us parents who left us a heritage of Christian ideals and the perseverance to follow in the better paths of life, let us forge ahead, ever striving to attain a higher level, not necessarily in the attainment of wealth or material possessions, but in leading a better and fuller way of life, which would be pleasing in the sight of our Maker as well as those who have gone before us.

Names of the descendants of J. Jacob and Emma Ensinger may be found on the roles of all walks of life, in all present-day activities (religious, military, civic as well as all vocations).

No attempt would be made to evaluate the success of either one of us. This is beyond our purpose, but to lead a full and fruitful life, such as our parents have done, with a devout and religious nature, is a goal for each and every one of us to follow.

Reasonable care has been exercised in the gathering and listing of information and dates. We would ask your indulgence and tolerance for any errors or omissions.

JACOB R. ENSINGER.

A Brief History

J. Jacob and Emma Ensinger Family

One hundred and three years ago a small sailing vessel left German shores with a group of people, some of them, no doubt, leaving their native land for the promises and visions of this new land of America, which probably offered so much more in the way of life, namely more opportunities to the thrifty immigrants of those days, in order that they may make a newer and wealthier class of people of this United States of America. In all probability the aims of the majority of these immigrants was to seek wealth. But there was one family among the group, the family of Adam and Christina (Gehrig) Ensinger, whose desire was not for wealth, who left their home in Wurttenberg to regain the health of their ten-year-old first-born son, John Jacob Ensinger. The remaining members of the family consisted of: Christina, a step-sister of our father; Adam, Kate and Fred, brothers and sister of our father. An uncle of John Jacob's also accompanied the group on their voyage. The trip was made at the recommendation of their doctor, who believed that a trip across the ocean might go a long way toward regaining John's health.

Our father really went under the name of Jacob (his middle name) and his first name (John) was not known of by most of us (his children) until it was revealed by the inscription on his tombstone which they (our parents) had erected on Mellinger's Cemetery (the family burial ground) quite some time before his passing away. So from here on we will refer to him as "Jacob". The reason for him using his middle name as his first name is not known, unless he may have been prompted to do this after another son was born to his parents some time after they resided in this country and he, too, was named John.

But getting back to our story of Jacob, he was born in Wurttenberg, Germany, February 2, 1850. He must have had a very unhappy and dismal period of youth, because of his afflictions which consisted of a disease then commonly known as "Children's Consumption", and a short time later he was stricken with Infantile Paralysis, which left him a cripple for the remainder of his life. True to their German doctor's predictions, Jacob's health was regained to a certain extent.

Jacob was a very thrifty man all his life. This admirable trait must have been one of his virtues even going back to his boyhood days in the old country when, in spite of his ailments, he gathered and sold manure from a public cattle watering place which must have been close to the home of his parents.

A voyage across the ocean in those days was quite an ordeal, since it had to be made in a small sailing vessel with no driving power but the winds. The writer can well recall of hearing his father tell of his experiences on that voyage — of how the ship was tossed off its course by the mighty winds, of how they encountered icebergs when they were off their course; of how the bodies of several passengers who died on the trip were sewed in a sheet and thrown overboard, for fear that whales may discover the scent of the corpses and would upset the ship. The ship landed in Philadelphia in the winter of 1860, after being on its perilous voyage three months.

The family settled in Reading upon their arrival. Arrangements for their abode here were made by an uncle of Jacob's who had come to this country earlier. However, the family soon moved out into the rural section in the vicinity of Wernersville, Berks County, where Adam and his wife reared their children into manhood and womanhood. This area to this very day is still occupied by many of our cousins and their families.

Of the family of Adam and Christina Ensinger, all have since passed on into the great beyond. Fred, the last one, died along 1943 - 45 at the ripe old age of eighty-six years. Until a short time before his death, he visited Jacob's children frequently. The writer recalls hearing this interesting old man (his uncle) relate experiences encountered on that trip across the ocean in company with our father. Another experience that he liked to relate was the hearing of the cannons roaring in the "Battle of Gettysburg".

On March 23, 1884, Jacob was married to Emma Rock, of West Cocalico Township, Lancaster County. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Brownmiller, who was then the pastor of Mellinger's Church.

She, too of German descent, was a daughter of Jacob and Sarah Christ Rock. She was born on February 26, 1867 in West Cocalico Township (in the Schoeneck area).

Emma's father died when she was only 11 years of age and, no doubt she experienced hardships at a very early age, since her mother was faced with raising a brood of 5 fatherless children. Very little information of Emma's girlhood is available except we do know that she was hired out on a farm (probably for her board and keep).

Her mother remarried a short time later to Aaron Keller.

After their marriage, Jacob and Emma lived with her mother and stepfather for a brief period, after which they moved to Berks County (in the Wernersville area) where they built a home.

While residing in that area, Katharina, their third child, was born and died. Her remains were interred in Swamp Cemetery near Reinholds. Efforts to locate this grave in recent years have proved fruitless.

Shortly thereafter they moved back to Lancaster County in the West Cocalico Township area with the exception of a very brief period when they lived in a John Hoover property in Ephrata Township (in the area where the Green Dragon is presently located). After living in various homes they finally purchased the home illustrated in this booklet and which the writer likes to think of as the family homestead. Although the first six or seven children of Jacob and Emma were born elsewhere, it was here in this home where the girls (the writer's sisters) matured to womanhood. The remainder of the children also first saw daylight in this home.

This home is still standing today, along Sandy Hill Road, midway between Cocalico Road and the Mt. Airy Road, in West Cocalico Township, north of Schoeneck. The outside appearance of the home has not changed to any great extent.

It was a 1½ story log house with weather-boarding attached. The upstairs was not plastered (we slept under the roof), and it was not too unusual to wake up in the morning and find snow, which had seeped in under the roof during the night, on our bed covers. On these mornings we were aroused from our slumber by the cheery call from mother with this phrase:

"Shtaandt Oof — Da Wise Hut Sich Khandt." ("Get up — The White One Hung Himself"). This was her way of letting us know that we had a snow-fall during the night.

Another incident connected with this home was the fact that the well would run dry each year. The water would then have to be carried from a small farm (Peter Althouse's), a distance of close to one mile.

The writer can well recall the parade that ensued Sunday nights, usually every member of the family participating, to carry enough water to do the family laundry the following day.

All of the children attended Mellinger's School at one time or another.

The family income was very limited since Jacob was a cripple and had to peddle such items as thread, safety pins, shoe strings, and red and white lozenges as an only source of income. Emma worked in various homes (domestic work) throughout the area to help with the support of the family. Later she kept the children of John and Ada, as well as those of neighbors while their parents worked in the factory. At one time she (Emma) had an even dozen youngsters to care for and supervise. Strict behavior had to be maintained and occasionally the rod had to be used to maintain order.

In order to supplement the family income, the children (with the exception of the writer) were hired out on farms at a very early age.

To provide meat for the subsistence of the family, Jacob raised several hogs each year which were butchered. They also had chickens to supply their own needs. The feed that was needed for these hogs and chickens was usually procured on an exchange basis. Jacob had a 2-wheel handdrawn cart which would be used to fetch damaged or torn feed bags from Shenk's Mill at Cocalico, which Emma would repair. He would then return these bags to the mill and would receive feed in exchange for this work. The approximate distance to the mill was 3 miles, thus making a total of 6 miles to walk in one day and also pulling a cart of bags or feed, whichever the case might be. This in itself must have been quite a task, especially since Jacob was plagued with a lame leg and limped quite badly when he walked a long distance.

Acts like these and many others bear witness to the grim determination that existed in the hearts and minds of Jacob and Emma to provide the necessities of life for their family to the best of their ability.

Wood was used as fuel for heating and cooking and it was sawed and split entirely by Jacob. This, too, was a task that necessitated much time, patience and effort since he had a withered hand which was a great handicap in this type of work. The writer can well recall his part in assisting his father in this task. He would sit on the long pieces of wood that were placed on the saw buck while it was being sawed to stove length. Then at times he would hold the wedges on the wood until his father "struck the first blow", imbedding the wedge in the wood to be split.

Jacob and Emma had an unquenchable faith in religion. Although to the writer's knowledge, they had no direct affiliations with any church prior to their moving to Ephrata, they took up membership in the Ephrata Mennonite Church. However, they walked many miles on some occasions to attend services in different churches. Prayer Services were also conducted in their home by representative groups from churches. They had a collection of books on religion (all in the German language), which they read quite frequently. Especially Jacob would spend much time (usually on rainy days) in their first floor bedroom reading out loud from his Testament or other religious books hour after hour.

All of the girls who grew to womanhood entered the cigar factory at Schoeneck at a very early age, where they learned the trade of cigar-making.

In spite of the poverty that existed in our household, the family always had plenty to eat — not the fancy variety, but the wholesome, nutritious kind that "stuck to the ribs". Our mother was a very good cook and had learned the art of "making the best with the least", always doing a lot of baking, canning, drying and preserving all kinds of fruits and vegetables which they raised on their own small farm. Christmas and Easter usually brought forth inexpensive gifts and candies. This necessitated a trip to Denver, pulling a two-wheel wagon filled with carpet rags that our mother made, to be exchanged for these items that would gladden our hearts.

In August of 1914 the family (then consisting of Jacob and Emma and the writer) moved in with Elsie and her family at 29 South Maple Street, Ephrata. This was necessitated because Emma was unable to do the housework since she had undergone surgery at the Reading Hospital. Earlier that year the family circle at 29 South Maple Street was further increased with the return of Elmer and Harvey from the farms, and Annie and her daughter, Lottie. Lizzie also lived there, having moved to Ephrata a short time before in order to secure better employment than the Schoeneck area offered.

In April of 1915 (Emma having recovered from her operation), the family again "struck out on their own", moving into the home now listed as 610 East Main Street, Ephrata. At that time this area was within the bounds of Ephrata Township, and the writer attended the old Bethany School. The family circle then consisted of Jacob and Emma, Annie and Lottie, Lizzie, Elmer, Harvey and the writer. The family moved quite often in the next three years to the following addresses, respectively: 14 North Church Street, 65 North Church Street, 29 South Maple Street, 27 South Maple Street, then finally to 529 East Main Street where they lived for nearly twelve years. In order to supplement the family income, tobacco stripping and gauze shirt taping was done in the home. This meant that there was always plenty to do, not only for Emma, but for any one who may have had idle time on their hands, and especially Lottie and the writer. Out of necessity, this was imperative, for financial help. But Emma also was of the opinion that idleness for youth tends to get them into mischief. customary to work before and after school and at times pretty well into the night. However, tobacco stripping and shirt taping were never done on Sundays or holidays.

Even with the grown-ups working in factories, money was still a pretty scarce item in the Ensinger household and many times it was necessary to peddle commodities from door to door (such as Larkin's products) if a minor piece of furniture or household item was desired, which was usually given as a premium for selling these products.

The writer can recall very distinctly the acquisition of children's rockers that were earned by Lottie and yours truly by the sale of Larkin's products. These rockers are still the prize possessions of their recipients who had to sell ever so many packs of salt and soap which were only two of the hundreds of items that comprised the Larkin line. These two items cost the least in the line, and consequently it meant that you had to call at a large number of homes and take orders before you could boost sales to an amount where you could secure any worthwhile premiums. Many other household commodities such as dishes, blankets, etc., were secured on the same basis.

NOTE—The writer mentions this experience merely to bring out the facts about the "good old days" to show that there were no Santa Clauses in those days. If you wanted anything, you really had to go out and work for it. This applied to many other families as well as our own.

Insofar as recreation was concerned for the members of the Ensinger household, the writer can well recall the acquisition of a victrola along about 1917. This was the source of many hours of enjoyment. Teams (horse and buggy) could be hired from a local holstery and this was a frequent Sunday afternoon practice. This type of recreation would sometimes bring on some rather thrilling experiences if the horses suddenly balked or would make an attempt to "run away", thus giving the occupants "the scare of their lives".

Jacob continued peddling after the family's removal to Ephrata. In spite of the fact that his earnings from this source were small, he managed to save enough to buy a double tombstone and have it erected on Mellinger's Cemetery as well as accumulating sufficient money to more than pay for his funeral.

In January, 1921, the family circle decreased in numbers when Annie and Howard Lutz were united in marriage and immediately went to house-keeping, taking Lottie with them. In the spring of 1927 it decreased again in size when the writer and his family (Edith and Ray) went to housekeeping. Lizzie and her daughter, Helen, also left the family when Lizzie secured domestic work with a family at Bareville.

On Friday morning, November 4, 1927, Jacob succumbed to a stroke (which he suffered two days earlier), at the age of 77 years, 9 months and 2 days. Funeral Services were conducted in Mellinger's Church, with the Rev. Benjamin Wenger (Mennonite), and the Rev. Dr. Martin W. Schweitzer (Reformed), officiating. Emma continued to maintain the home after the loss of her husband.

On Sunday morning, January 5th, 1930, tragedy struck the family when Elmer was seriously injured in an automobile accident and the following day succumbed to these injuries at the age of 27 years, 10 months and 11 days. (Catherine Diana, three-month-old daughter of Harvey and his wife, Ida, passed away on December 11, 1927). Thus the "Grim Reaper" had removed a loved one from our family circle at 529 East Main Street for the third time within a period of a little over two years.

After Elmer's death, Emma gave up housekeeping and had Public Sale of her household goods on Saturday, March 29th, 1930. She then made her home with Jacob and Edith, who lived across the street from her home. She moved along with them (a short time later) to 33 Akron Road, where she lived with them for the remainder of her earthly life, which came to a close on Friday, May 9th, 1947, at the age of 80 years, 2 months and 13 days.

By mere coincidence, she, too, like her mate almost 20 years before, was stricken Wednesday night and passed away Friday morning. Although she was ill and confined to her room, she did not appear to be too serious until Wednesday night. Funeral Services were held in Mellinger's Church with Rev. Mahlon Zimmerman (Mennonite) and Rev. David J. W. Noll (Reformed) officiating.

Thus came to a close the chapter of life here on earth for Jacob and Emma Ensinger with their transition into the Church Triumphant.

"Ensinger's" Said To Be of Swiss Descent

According to a letter received by Harvey L. Ensinger from a cousin, a son of our late uncle Fred (by a former marriage), the Ensinger family had their origin in Switzerland, and not in Germany, as was the general belief. It is also interesting to note that the letter writer spells his name as "Insinger" and urges us to do likewise.

We quote the letter in its entirety below:

2282 S. Humboldt Street Denver 10, Colorado July 16, 1946

Dear Mr. Ensinger:

I can give you a general outline of the places and names. We have the same grandfather and his name was "Adam". Adam had 5 brothers and they were born and raised in Switzerland. One brother went into Holland and he had 2 sons in Holland; one was the General of the Holland Army and the other came to Philadelphia. Then the grandfather, "Adam Insinger", left Switzerland and went to Germany. And there they did not like the name "Insinger" and changed it to "Ensinger". They claimed "Insinger" was not German enough. Then he left Germany and came to the United States.

Adam started in to peddle with a spring wagon. Adam had a son by the name of Fred, one Johnny, and I think one Adam, Jr., and Jake, and a daughter Kate. Kate was married to "Keller" and lived in Reading, Penna. Fred was my father. Most of the brothers went to the Sanitarium.

My mother couldn't get along with my father "Fred" so she moved with her parents to Reading and then my grandparents raised me until I was about 17 years old. Then I went to live with my Aunt Kate Keller (Fred's sister). She died about 50 years ago.

I went up to Fred's house one time and saw a bunch of children that I did not know — and behold! they had another son by the name of "Fred" — which is of course my half-brother.

A second cousin of ours, who was a multi-millionnaire (the one who came from Holland), and lived in Greeley, Colorado, had the family tree traced clear back to Switzerland, Germany and Holland. He died about 15 years ago — at a very old age. This cousin of ours owned a bank, was President of the Chamber of Commerce, and owned wool mills — he was very prominent.

The real history of the Insinger's is very colorful and one can see the name in Switzerland. I wish to impress upon you that your name is "Insinger", that the "Ensinger" came into being only by pressure brought upon Adam when he was in Germany. "Ensinger" is German Jewish and there is definitely no Jewish blood anywhere in our family.

I am 70 years old. I am in pretty good shape physically, but am nearly totally blind. I was a carpenter contractor here in Denver for 25 years. I am a bachelor. I have enough to live alone on for every day living. I like Denver and think it much nicer than the East.

I wish that I might have an opportunity to see and visit with some of you. I am sure that I could tell you many stories of our ancestry. If you ever have a chance to come to Denver — either you or some family members, please let me know in advance so I would be sure to be here.

I was so glad to have your letter. Another of Adam's brothers had a dish washing machine factory in Philadelphia, and another one big lumber mills in Oregon. Adam's creation seems to be the only ones who were not wealthy — but we were not afraid to work.

With best wishes to you and all of yours.

Very sincerely,

FRED INSINGER.

P. S. — Write again soon.

NOTE—Some or probably all of the information contained in this letter is authentic, without a doubt. This could also clarify the reason for our being referred to as "Insinger's" instead of "Ensinger's" by people who knew our father. Incidentally, he always pronounced it as "Insinger" but, to the writer's knowledge, it was always spelled "Ensinger".

Ada Ensinger Born March 25, 1885

Married to John Latshaw

Born November 17, 1879 — Died February 14, 1958

Ada, the first born of Jacob and Emma, was married to John Latshaw of West Cocalico Township. They settled in West Cocalico Township, and resided in various homes in that area with the exception of a short period, when they lived in the area of Ephrata, and later on in Hopeland, after which they again moved back into West Cocalico Township (on the old Latshaw homestead), along the Swamp Bridge Road, north of Schoeneck. They were engaged in cigar making during the earlier years of their marriage, as well as small scale farming. John also worked in a feed mill for a brief period of time. They also operated a dairy for a short time, retailing their products in the Denver area. Later they entered the employment of the F. & M. Hat Co. John continued in this position until his retirement (which was hastened by failing health). In the fall of 1957 they sold their farm and took up residence in a trailer (on the rear of the premises of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Pfautz, in East Cocalico Township (between Ephrata and Reamstown, on former Route 222). John died on February 14, 1958, at the age of 78 years, 2 months and 27 days. Funeral services were held in Mellinger's Lutheran Church, where John and Ada were members for quite some time. He was laid to rest in the adjoining cemetery.

Several parcels of land from the old Latshaw homestead were sold by John and Ada to their daugher, Helen, and their grandchild-ren, Clarence and Arlene Gockley and George and Grace Latshaw who erected homes thereon and are living there today.

Ada is still living in their trailer at the same location. They had 11 children, 4 of which died in infancy.

Hat Company for the past 27 years, while his wife is employed at the plant of the Eby Shoe Corporation, Ephrata. They had 9 children, 8 of which are living.

Arlene, their oldest daughter, is married to Clarence Gockley. He is a veteran of World War II, having served in the European Theater. He was a prisoner of war for 14 months. They live in the Schoeneck area (Swamp Bridge Road). Clarence works for the Glen Gery Brick Corporation, Ephrata, while Arlene works for the Eby Shoe Corporation. They have three children, one of which passed away in infancy and is buried at Mellinger's Cemetery. They are members of Mellinger's Lutheran Church.

Martha Ensinger

Born September 16, 1898 — Died January 17, 1899

Lottie Grace Ensinger

Born April 23, 1900 — Died February 6, 1901

Elmer Adam Ensinger Born February 26, 1902 — Died January 6, 1930

Elmer received most of his schooling at Mellinger's School. He was hired out on the Scott Gockley Farm at an early age during which time he also attended the Mt. Airy School. He did attend the Ephrata Borough Schools for a short time, however. While attending the latter school, his teacher, the late S. G. Hipple, recognized his outstanding aptitude with figures. He predicted quite a career for him (especially as a mathematician) and endeavored to have him continue his education. Unfortunately, due to the urgent financial need of the family, the idea had to be abandoned.

An incident was told to the writer that occurred while Elmer attended the Ephrata Borough Schools. The teacher who was very disappointed with his students' inability to solve an arithmetic problem threatened to "thrash" the entire class if there was no one in the group that could do this. In spite of the fact that the class personnel included some rather brilliant students (two of which now head one of the area's largest banks), Elmer's ability to solve the problem saved the day for all his classmates (including Harvey).

His arithmetic papers were eagerly sought by his classmates (for copying purposes). He would then prepare two sets of papers, one correct and the other incorrect. The latter would be laid out as a decoy for unsuspecting "copy-cats" who would be disappointed to find they had the wrong answers.

Upon leaving school he worked in a shirt factory for quite some time, after which he was employed by the East End Planing Mill, Ephrata, (Continued on next page) until the late summer of 1929, when he was incapacitated after having one of his hands caught in a wood-working machine.

In the fall of 1927 he joined his brothers in the organization of Ensinger Bros., printers, with its initial location being at 529 East Main Street, Ephrata. Although he was not a printer himself, he kept the books of the firm, and tended to many other duties that necessitated skill other than printing. He was quite handy as a carpenter and was mechanically inclined to a large degree, which came in quite handy in the process of starting the new enterprise.

His actual participation in the printing business was limited to a part time basis until the fall of 1929, after he had fully recovered from his accident at the planing mill. It was then that he became a full-time co-worker with his brothers, in anticipation of learning the printing trade.

Fate intervened, however, and his career came to an end when he had the misfortune of being involved in an automobile accident near Reading on Sunday morning, January 5, 1930. He was rushed to the Homeopathic Hospital (now known as the Community General Hospital), Reading, where he passed away the following day at the age of 27 years, 10 months and 11 days.

Funeral services were conducted from the late home and at Mellinger's Church, with interment in the adjoining cemetery. He was a member of the First Reformed Church (now the First United Church of Christ), Ephrata.

Elmer was a member of the Wall Brook Serenaders (one of the most popular orchestras in this area at that time), in which he played the tenor banjo.

Harvey Leroy Ensinger Born February 16, 1903

Married to Ida June Remp

Born June 8, 1910

Harvey (like his brother, Elmer, too, received most of his schooling at Mellinger's, after which he attended the Ephrata Borough Schools. Upon leaving school he became a silk weaver, working in Ephrata and later at Lancaster. He also learned cigar making (during a dull period in the silk mill). Later on (about 1922) he entered the employment of the Ephrata Reporter, where he learned the printing trade. He then worked for the Commercial Printing Company, Ephrata, and also a printing concern at Reading. Later on he worked for the New Holland Clarion, until he relinquished this job to spend his entire time in the operation of the plant of Ensinger Bros. (along with yours truly). This latter transition occurred about 1932. In the fall of 1937 the entire printing plant (which was located in the basement of 124 E. Main Street, Ephrata), was destroyed by fire. Undaunted by this reversal, he (along with his brother) re-established the plant in a new location (the Ephrata Band Hall) on E. Locust Street, Ephrata. Nine months later the printing plant was again moved into a newly constructed building (on the extreme rear of the site formerly occupied by the Band Hall). Here the Ephrata Ensign, a weekly newspaper had its inception in the fall of 1939. Harvey, along with his brother, continued to publish it until the summer of 1943, when he purchased his brother's share and continued to operate the plant until the middle of 1945 when he sold the business. After working for the new owners for some time, he helped organize Ensinger Printing Service, Adamstown (along with his brother). He is the sole owner of this enterprise, which is one of the most modern commercial plants in this end of the county.

He was married to the former Ida June Remp and they had five children, one of which died in infancy.

He resides at 235 Park Ave., Ephrata. He is a member of the First United Church of Christ, Ephrata.

Jacob Ray Ensinger Born June 22, 1907

Married to Edith Mae Grumbling

Born May 22, 1909

Jacob served his apprenticeship at the Ephrata Review, starting at the age of 14 years. After working in various printing plants in this area, he joined his brothers in the establishment and operation of Ensinger Brothers. After that (for the next 15 years), his vocation closely paralleled that of his brother, Harvey. However, in August, 1942, he left the printing business to work at Armstrong Cork Company, Lancaster. A year later he sold his share of the printing business to his brother. After three years, the yearn of printer's ink lured him back into the harness when he bought the printing business and good will of the late Henry Ziemer, Adamstown, which formed the nucleus of Ensinger Printing Service. After operating this new venture for several years, he sold it to his brother, Harvey, and has been an employee there ever since.

He is married to the former Edith Grumbling, who assists him in the operation of a calendar business, which is housed in a building to the rear of their home.

On April 12, 1930, they moved to 33 Akron Road, Ephrata, into their newly purchased home, where they are still living today.

Both are members of First United Church of Christ, Ephrata. They have one son, Ray.
